Don't wait to fix your hearing problem

If you have increasing difficulty hearing, you are not alone.

Unfortunately, people wait an average of seven years before coming to terms with hearing difficulties. Jennifer Abbott of Hear At Home Mobile Hearing Clinic understands and can help. A BC Licensed Hearing Aid Practitioner, Jennifer has earned the business and gratitude of hundreds of North Shore families with her in-home hearing testing and treatment service.

"I believe in offering a high level of service," says Jennifer. "You just need to call or email the office and set up an appointment. Typically it may take up to two weeks to get that appointment however there is always time set aside for urgent issues. Fitting a hearing aid requires follow up appointments and adjustments."

Early treatment is crucial.

"For a retired person leaving a hearing loss untreated will affect their quality of life, but also affect their ability to process information. The brain starts to get lazy and recent studies show that if a person is at risk for Alzheimer's or Dementia, symptoms may appear sooner. The longer you leave hearing loss untreated, the more it affects your ability to process information. You will have the most success with hearing aids through early treatment."

New technology is helping as well.

"We can fit much smaller devices to treat a higher degree of hearing loss. Also, for the younger adult we now have many wireless solutions that work with the hearing aids."

In the end it comes down to personalized, one-on-one treatment.

"My clients rely on me to always be there for them and I am. I try to make everything as simple as possible for them. We also offer monthly hearing clinics at six North Shore Private Homes. I go to Churchill House, Sunrise Senior Living, The Summerhill Parc, Cedar Springs Parc, Hollyburn House and The Westerleigh Parc."

If you or someone you know is dealing- or not dealing- with hearing issues, help extend their quality of life by checking out Hear at Home online at hearathome.com or call for an appointment at 778-340-1101.
